Matalonis calls athletics boycott

By Randy Roguski
Staff Writer

A student boycott of men's athletics events will soon be organized by the Undergraduate Student Organization, USO President Paul Matalonis told the Board of Trustees during its meeting Thursday in Edwardsville.

Matalonis was responding to a proposed postponement in submission of a report on SIU-C intercollegiate athletics. The board subsequently voted to delay submission of the report until its March meeting.

Matalonis said the boycott, combined with an endorsement of "mass attendance" at women's athletics events, will denounce "the lack of true fiscal restraint of the dominating Men's Athletics Department."

USO Vice President Bob Quane said organization of the boycott will begin Friday.

The delayed athletics report will help the board decide whether to continue the temporary $16 athletics fee. The fee, enacted last June, will be abolished in June unless the board extends it before then.

Presentation of the athletics report has now been delayed twice. It had initially been postponed from December and planned for Thursday's meeting.

Only one board member expressed concern over Thursday's delay. A. D. Van Meter Jr. said, "I think deadlines have reasons. I feel strongly that the administration has had sufficient time to respond."

Van Meter said he will be "tremendously disappointed" if the athletics report is not presented to the trustees at its next meeting.

According to President Albert Somit, the postponement is necessary to allow more time for constituency input to the report.

"With the Christmas break, it's been difficult for constituencies to respond," Somit told the board. "I would not want to come to the board without the constituency input."

Matalonis disputed Somit's concern with student input to the athletics report, saying that the USO has "ample evidence" that student concerns have not been "rightly considered."

He said that the repeated delays are "postponement of the inevitable."

"Although we have submitted our response to the president's office, we feel that our position has not, and will not, receive the proper attention," Matalonis said.

In September, Somit asked student leaders to respond to the athletics fee issue. A USO task force recommended to Somit last week that the $30 fee be reduced by $2 each of the next three years.

"This group of students worked long and hard to find an answer—the best answer—to the athletics problem," Matalonis said.

Matalonis said the student boycott of men's athletics events will alert the board to the lack of student input to the upcoming decision on the athletics fee.

He said the USO will also circulate positions which he said will indicate student support for USO recommendations, and will encourage students to attend the March board meeting.

Gus says the attendance figures lately indicate most sports fans are way ahead of Matalonis.

IBHE budget to exceed $1 billion

SPRINGFIELD (AP)—Although education can expect a record state budget for next year, school officials will be disappointed by the size of the recession-restricted increase, Gov. James R. Thompson said Thursday.

Thompson declined to reveal the budget recommendations he will make to the Illinois General Assembly. But he pledged that next year's state aid to higher education will pass the $1 billion mark for the first time in Illinois history.

The State Board of Education last month proposed a new school budget of nearly $2.9 billion, about $2.4 billion of which is state money. That budget would include an increase of about $187 million in state money over last year.

More than 2 million Illinois elementary and secondary school students are affected by the board's budget.

The state's Board of Higher Education, meanwhile, has requested a budget of $1.28 billion, representing an increase of $109 million in state funds.

Thompson said he warned state education officials during a meeting Wednesday that "times are tough." He said the recession and the Reagan administration's threats of cuts in federal assistance make a balanced state budget a necessity.

"To have a balanced budget in a year of declining federal aid, a year of recession, means that you can't give education everything they want," Thompson told reporters during an impromptu news conference during a Lincoln's Birthday observance at Lincoln's Tomb.

"They will get an increase and it will be substantial," the governor said.

"Now it will not increase as rapidly as they (education officials) would like, but I could never even in a good year satisfy education on everything they would like," Thompson remarked.

Thompson said his recommendations for school spending will be revealed Friday when the two education boards receive letters outlining his proposals.

On other budget-related subjects, Thompson said he has urged President Reagan and administration officials to provide federal funding for the completion of projects already under way.

Tuition raise to be approved

By Mike Anton
Staff Writer

A minimum figure of 10 percent will probably be approved for a tuition increase at SIU by the Board of Trustees at the board's March meeting, Chancellor Kenneth Shaw said Thursday.

Shaw made the comment at the meeting of the board in Edwardsville, at which a notice asking for a 10 percent tuition increase was proposed. The increase would raise total tuition and fees at SIU-C to $1,004.20 a year from its present rate of $942.10.

"I'm always reluctant to have any kind of increase," Shaw said. "But the fact is, if we are to achieve adequate funding for education, this increase is necessary. Or perhaps more."

Because of higher costs, the Illinois Board of Higher Education in January recommended a statewide 10 percent tuition increase. However, the over $2 million that the increase would generate at SIU may not be enough to cover funding cuts, Shaw said.

He said he wanted the board to "be forewarned" that the recommendation by the IBHE to calculate a 10.5 percent statewide salary increase or a 90 percent salary base, rather than the previous 95 percent base, would leave a $550,000 deficit that the IBHE expects the system to make up.

An additional speculated reduction to 5 percent from 10.5 percent in general revenue funding by Gov. Thompson, may make an a further tuition increase necessary, Shaw said. The reduction would cut funding by $58 million statewide, he said.

"Funding for higher education will be limited," Shaw said. "This means that a 10 percent tuition increase most likely will be the minimum increase. We're just waiting for the governor's indication."

Thompson should make his recommendations for higher education funding prior to the board's March meeting, Shaw said. He said those recommendations could come as early as this week.

Busboy confesses to starting fire at the Las Vegas Hilton

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — A busboy arrested for allegedly setting the killer fire at the Las Vegas Hilton confessed he started the fire and said it happened while he was engaged in a homosexual act, a police detective said at a news conference Thursday.

Philip Bruce Cline, 23, told officers that during the homosexual act a drape was lighted accidentally by a marijuana cigarette, said Lt. John Conner, chief of the Metropolitan Police Department's homicide division.

"He indicated he had been on the eighth floor and had been with another homosexual and was engaged in a homosexual act when the draperies were set on fire next to the elevator," Conner told reporters. "He says it was lighted by a marijuana cigarette."

Conner said Cline, who initially told authorities he tried to douse the blaze Tuesday night, made the confession Wednesday, the second time he was questioned by police in connection with the fire which claimed eight lives.

"Certain statements were made by Philip Cline at 2 a.m. the morning after the fire," Conner said.

He said detectives felt "the story he was telling could not possibly be true," and they brought him in for questioning again late Wednesday afternoon.

"He was brought back in and given a polygraph (lie detector) test which he failed miserably," Conner said. "He then admitted he had set the fire at Las Vegas Hilton Hotel."

Earlier Thursday, Cline was ordered held without bail by Justice of the Peace Earle White Jr., pending arraignment in the next week on eight counts of murder and one count of first-degree arson. The probable cause hearing was held via closed-circuit TV, with Cline in the jail and White at the nearby Justice Court.

White was given an affidavit from homicide detectives who outlined their evidence against the room-service busboy in the blaze, which killed eight people and injured 198. Details were not released.

"I've read the affidavit around the circumstances of the arrest and I have found probable cause to hold you," White told the prisoner. "As far as the charges are concerned, I set no bail."

Haig privately fears Poland invasion

WASHINGTON (AP) — As labor unrest intensifies in Poland, Secretary of State Alexander Haig Jr., is making it known—guardedly and unofficially—that he considers Soviet military intervention to be inevitable.

For the record, Haig's position is that Soviet intervention is neither imminent nor inevitable. Privately, however, Haig believes a kind of creeping anarchy is taking over in Poland, creating an intolerable situation for Moscow.

The analysis that supports Haig's view is this: Faced with a clear threat of losing control over a key East European satellite, Soviet leaders will decide they have no choice but to intervene, despite the disruptive consequences for Soviet relations with the United States and the rest of the world.

This view is winning increasing acceptance at the State Department. What is surprising is that Haig has allowed it to float to the surface, and thus to the press and the public. Some officials fear that the reports could remove one restraint to intervention—eliminating Soviet fears that the United States will be surprised by the movement into Poland by Soviet troops.

In an editorial Wednesday, the Washington Post referred to "American officials (who) are expressing semi-publicly their expectation that the Soviets will invade," and said, "But do the officials muttering it understand the implications of what they are doing? ... They are handing Moscow an excuse to invade."

The Post did not name Haig as a source of these "semi-public" statements, but last weekend, NBC News carried one of the first reports.

Anderson to become TV newsmen

CHICAGO (AP)—Saying he hopes to use his political experience to shed light on issues of importance, former independent presidential candidate John B. Anderson announced Thursday he will become a television news commentator.

Anderson said at a news conference that he signed a two-year contract with WLS-TV, the ABC-owned station in Chicago. Anderson said he will deliver commentary and analysis of matters of national and international significance on the 10 p.m. news three nights a week and also serve as a "special correspondent" in producing documentaries.

Poland's premier asks for peace

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski, Poland's new premier, appealed to workers Thursday for "90 peaceful days," warning that continued unrest could pitch Poland into civil war. He also reshuffled the government's top echelon and announced a 10-point program to tackle the economic emergency.

Jaruzelski, who replaced Jozef Pinkowski as premier Wednesday and retains his post as defense minister, named five new Cabinet ministers and two new vice premiers—the sixth purge of government leaders since last summer's strikes that spawned independent unionism. He outlined an economic plan to deal with complaints on food and housing shortages, but called for worker discipline and improved productivity.

Doubts aired on balanced budget

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite President Reagan's plans for sweeping cuts in federal spending, the administration is expressing little hope that Reagan can fulfill his promise to balance the budget by 1983, sources said Thursday.

The sources, who did not want to be identified, said administration economists now are indicating that 1984 probably is the earliest that the budget can be balanced.

Murray L. Weidenbaum, named chairman of the White House Council of Economic Advisers, told reporters at a briefing Thursday it is his "personal hope" that the administration can produce a balanced budget by 1984.

Pot smuggling leader sentenced

ALTON (AP)—One member of the board of directors of "the Company," believed to be the nation's largest pot smuggling ring, was sentenced Thursday to 84 years in federal prison.

James A. Mitchell, 50, of Brighton, had pleaded guilty last month to all charges in a 42-count indictment against him and 10 others.

Federal officials say an estimated 200 persons were involved in the smuggling ring, believed to have illegally imported 150 tons of marijuana.

Buzbee considers running for lieutenant governor post

By Scott Canon
Staff Writer

State Sen. Kenneth V. Buzbee, D-Carbondale, said Thursday he is considering running for the Illinois lieutenant governor post in 1982.

Buzbee said that although he has given himself a deadline for making the decision by the end of July, he will probably make up his mind over whether or not to run by the "latter part of the spring."

"I've talked with several people about it and I'm entertaining the idea," Buzbee said.

Among the people he has discussed the proposition with are Adlai Stevenson III, former U.S. senator, and State Sen. Phillip Rock, D-Oak Park. He said both men are considering a quest for the governor's office.

Both Stevenson and Rock are big names in Illinois politics. Stevenson served on the U.S. Senate from 1970 to 1980. Rock will soon take over the state senate presidency.

Buzbee said he would feel comfortable running with either of the men. He said that in both cases "we would compliment each other on the ticket. I also think we could work well together in office," he added.

For Buzbee to run, however, he would need a guarantee that his being lieutenant governor would be more than just being a figurehead.

"I'd make an agreement beforehand that I would be involved either in implementing or developing policy," the senator said.

Buzbee listed a number of areas he would want to be involved in. He said he would want a hand in appropriations and the budget making process.

"In my work on the Senate I have dealt with those topics and I have some expertise that could be useful," he said.

He also would like to be involved in energy matters. "I'm a member of the Energy Resources Commission and I have served on a number of national and regional energy councils," Buzbee said.

Norwood re-elected to board chairman post

By Mike Anton
Staff Writer

The Board of Trustees re-elected several officers at its regular meeting in Edwardsville Thursday, including William Norwood, who was re-elected chairman of the board.

Meanwhile, a replacement for board member Wayne Herberer, whose six-year term expired last month, is expected to be selected within the next two months.

Other officers re-elected were A.D. Van Meter Jr. as vice chairman and Carol Kimmel as secretary. Also board member George Wilkins and Kimmel were elected to the board's executive committee.

Norwood said that a replacement for board member Wayne Herberer will probably be picked by Gov. Thompson in the next two months. He said that Herberer would stay on until a replacement is confirmed.

in Washington earlier this week, he and other officials contended that projects started with federal funds should continue to be supported by the federal government despite Reagan's budget-slashing goals.

"If we've got a highway half-completed, let's finish it," Thompson said. "If we've got a hole in the ground somewhere in the country for a subway system, let's finish it."

Thompson said the same principle applies to a $475 million coal gasification plant slated for Perry County. The governor said the state has "invested $40 million already — let's finish it."

Thompson said he did not think federal money already committed to transportation programs will be jeopardized by the Reagan administration, although "their payment schedule may be stretched out a bit."

Student Center food prices increase

By Carol Knowles
Staff Writer

Be prepared to dig deeper into your pocket if you plan on eating at the Student Center. Beginning Saturday, a 10 percent across-the-board average price increase will take effect for cafeteria, restaurant and catering services, John Corker, director of the Student Center, said Thursday.

"Some items will not be increased and others will be increased greater than 10 percent," Corker said.

All beverages, desserts, yogurt, vegetables, Mexican dishes, pizza slices, breakfast items and salad sandwiches, such as tuna will be increased five cents. Pastries, except glazed donuts, will also be increased by that amount. Entrees and combination specials will be increased 10 cents. Whole pizzas will be increased 10 to 20 cents, lunches at Big Muddy Room will go up 15 cents and breakfasts there will be increased 25 cents. Catering services and restaurant prices will be increased 10 percent.

There are some bright spots to the increase, however. Hamburgers, cheese sandwiches, bread and rolls and concession prices at athletic events will not be increased.

Corker said some prices could not be raised to keep competitive with prices in town.

Corker said people eating at the Student Center should be reminded that the price of food items include tax as of last semester, making the food items appear more expensive than they really are.

Corker cited several reasons for the increase, including inflation, added labor costs and a drop in sales.

"Food prices have increased as much as 13 percent in the past six months," Corker said.

Labor costs have strained the budget in two areas, according to Corker. The minimum wage increased 25 cents an hour in January, while other University employees received a 16 percent increase in October. An increase in hospital benefits to workers also attributed to the food price increase, Corker said.

'Ticket squad' strikes again

The "Woody Parking Shuffle" indeed! For the past few days I have read about the trials and the tribulations of those trying to park in Woody Hall's lot. For those of you who may not have experienced this yet—congratulations! It is a losing battle and is best to avoid it if possible.

I often find it necessary to park in Woody's lot. Having been ticketed for various "petty" offenses, I have become very cautious when I park. I thought I had the procedure figured out. I have my red sticker, I park on the east side of the lot and I always feed the ever-starving meters. I have also been very careful to avoid parking on yellow lines. Unfortunately, this doesn't always help.

I found one slot available on the east side when I needed to park my car Feb. 14th. As I went to give the meter its needed dose of quarters, I found a quarter was jammed in the meter, therefore it wouldn't work. Having no other option, I put a note on the meter and one on my windshield stating the problem: the meter would not take my money. I felt relatively secure knowing that the meter people are human (or I had thought) and would understand that I had, in fact, made the effort to pay. I really should have known better. I got a ticket, just like clockwork. A friend of mine saw the notes and after seeing the meter person write the ticket anyway, questioned her. He was told that it was "too bad—the ticket was already written."

I understand the parking division is strapped for funds. After all, it takes a lot of gas to keep those "little red trucks" running all the time while the attendant issues one or two tickets before returning to the vehicle to drive 10 feet to issue more. It does seem though, that if these meter people are in fact humans and not machines, they could show it from time to time—especially when an effort was so obviously made to explain a situation I had no control over.

My point is to let these of you who find themselves under similar circumstance know that you can't win. You'd do much better to forget the sticker business and park wherever you can find a place. At least you won't be putting out a fortune for parking fines.—Karen Cook, senior, Dental Technology.

Reagan hurts the poor again

It sickens me to see Reagan considering decreasing the number of SASEG's and student loans. This is just another injustice of our "capitalist" system and another example of Reagan's indifference to the middle class and poor people of our country.

Let's face it—Reagan is the millionaire's, and the oil and industrial baron's president. He obviously feels the only people who deserve an education are the people with the big bucks. What better way to continue oppression of the poor, and to insure that the offspring of today's rich are the rich people of the future.

Surely, people from all walks of life deserve a chance to learn, and to better themselves. Whatever happened to equal opportunity? What is the point in spending billions on defense, when we have no future to defend? Perhaps these billions, OUR tax dollars, should be applied to socialized education—not just through high school, but at the university level too. I am appalled that the government of "We the people" can so degrade the importance of education for the entire public.—Jackie Bierman, freshman, General Studies.

TV 'saints' have a dirty job

While there's a lull in the media-tempest known as the "hostage crisis," it might prove worthwhile to remember that the comparable events of My Lai, the race riot at Tulsa and the Indian massacre at Wounded Knee were perpetrated by Americans—and not Iranians. This memory might call our righteously indignant patriotic tempers somewhat. Of course, if we have already received dissemination from our gods and the television executives, we can proceed to exact our pound of flesh. It is truly a dirty job showing the gods, niggers, reekings and now these camel-jockeys what the land of the free and the home of the brave stands for. Yes, it's filthy work, but thankfully we have the saints to do it.

By the way, what kind of Nielsen ratings do you think the United States can get by bombing 'em back to the Stone Age?—Everett G. Hughes, Carbondale

DE misses many activities

This is in response to Steve Katsinas' column on activism in the 1980s. Although I don't share his opinion that students are more active now than in the '60s and early '70s, I think that as the country becomes more polarized under the Reagan administration and world tensions rise, people will become, either by choice or necessity, more actively involved. Presently, few have been compelled to do so.

Katsinas is correct when he says active student organizations exist at SIUC, but one would be hard put to get that impression from reading the pages of the Daily Egyptian. For example, last Monday evening, the Coalition of Progressive Social Scientists sponsored a program that included a film, "El Salvador—Revolution or Death," and a talk by Salvadoran Ricardo Navarro. Over 200 people responded enthusiastically to this event, yet it went unreported in the DE.

On Tuesday evening, the GSC Programming Committee showed "Last Grave at Dimbazi," a documentary exposing the nature of apartheid politics in South Africa. An hour of lively discussion followed the film. Wednesday, in the Student Center, the Marine Mammal Society requested signatures on letters that will petition President Reagan to preserve and strengthen, not abolish, the Marine Mammals Protection Act. This also went unreported.

Other examples could be offered but the point is clear: active groups are responding to escalating threats to human rights and the environment, but they need members and support. The DE would do well to become actively involved in these endeavors by reporting on their activities.—Robert Kay, Graduate, Zoology.

Students should show lecturer common courtesy

I was under the impression that most people were raised with a sense of common courtesy. I find, to my dismay, that I am wrong.

I am presently enrolled in GSD 107 and, on lecture days, I cannot help but notice the people who sit behind me making derogatory comments about the instructor and his lectures.

These people must feel they know everything for they broadcast their "intelligence," and their lack of manners to their classmates as well as the instructor. This behavior is unnerving for both the teacher and the students who are not so knowledgeable. The lectures are geared to the knowledge of the majority of the class. If these students are so knowledgeable, they should "proficiency" out of the class. If they cannot, or will not, they should remain silent.—Victoria Klein, freshman, Agribusiness

Editor's note

Editor's note—A letter published Thursday by Professor Daniel E. Georges-Abeie, Administration of Justice, may have given some readers the impression that his request for an interview was turned down by Daily Egyptian reviewer Bill Crowe.

Professor Georges-Abeie had telephoned to ask for an opportunity to respond to Crowe's review of the movie "Fort Apache." He did not talk to Crowe but to two other staff members whose judgment was that Professor Georges-Abeie's views might best be expressed in a letter to the editor.

Subsequently, when Crowe learned of the interview request and the letter, he arranged before the letter was published to interview the professor next week about his experiences growing up in the South Bronx and depicted in "Fort Apache" and his opinions on how the media stereotype racial minorities. Crowe's report on the interview is forthcoming.

Let's wear our party image proudly

SO SIU-C HAS A reputation as being a party school? We might as well enjoy it.

Let's face it, for many of us, "partying" takes up a significant portion of our leisure time. Some people claim it is an uncreative form of entertainment, but we do it. Constantly and sometimes excessively.

But we're not unique in that respect. It's done in Champaign, it's done in DeKalb, it's even done, though this is an unsubstantiated rumor, in Charleston. And though people party all across this state, our town has the distinction of being the party capital of Illinois.

Where the rumor originated that we have an uncanny ability to indulge in the pleasures Auggie Busch and the natives of Columbia offer us more than most, nobody really knows. But the party label has been plastered on the fine name of Southern Illinois University at Carbondale, and as many of us learned in high school, labels are hard to shed. Since we have it, let's enjoy it.

Let's acknowledge the fact that people, no matter where they are, like to party. Whether we do it more than others is a question that can't be answered. But it's hard for me to believe we are so unique.

A COUPLE OF YEARS AGO my friends from Champaign boasted that a bar in their fine town

Jeffrey Smyth

Associate

poured out more Budweiser than any other bar in the nation. Now, the Illini don't have, or want, to be tagged as a bunch of partiers, but they have strange ways of concealing it.

Illini are a funny breed. I have heard many derogatory statements about our reputation made by Urbanites. But most of this talk came while I was in a bar or around a keg. Though they hide the word partying with terms like "formal dances" or "cailgating," these people, who believe the world begins and ends at the crossroads of Interstates 74 and 57, burp as much weed and slosh as much brew as anyone else.

And then there's DeKalbers. Many of my friends on hybrid corn land ask me how I can get in any schooling with so much partying going on around me. But when I ask them how they survive months of sub-zero temperatures and blistering cold winds, they say: "We just keep wasted."

SO WHY IS IT US? Why are we viewed as the forbidden children who are so prolific at altering our state of mind? I've been told it's because of surroundings. The serenity of the natural wonderland that we live in compels us to reach certain levels of consciousness that will tuck us into the peaceful harmony of nature. A weak argument but one I've heard repeatedly.

I've been told also we party so much because we live in the land of lost and unsatisfied souls. A place, far from the echoes of the city, far from the "real Illinois," where people come to be away from the environment where they grew up. A place where one can concentrate on leisurely activities and not worry about being bothered by others.

Those of us who spend endless hours studying can back me in saying persons who believe this argument are being deceived.

Though there is no explanation why SIU-C is this state's party capital, it's a fact that no matter what academic achievements our school makes, no matter how much we try and down-play the party image, it will be with us for a long time.

So let's enjoy it. Parties are happy events. I guess we're all happy people.

Praxis is blind to Cuban terrorism

WHILE I ADMIRE THE SPUNK of the people who put out Praxis (that socialist monthly found on top of cigarette machines throughout Carbondale), I think it is time someone balanced their one-sided view of events occurring in Central America and the Caribbean.

Praxis seems to delight in detailing the crimes of right-wing regimes in El Salvador and Guatemala (admittedly, abhorrent governments), while turning a blind eye towards Cuban subversion in, for example, democratic Jamaica. The transformation of Nicaragua's revolution from a democratic to a totalitarian path, thanks to the help of 2,500 Cuban advisors, is another topic curiously ignored by Praxis.

Why the oversight? I don't know. I don't profess to know the motivations of the Coalition of Progressive Social Scientists (the group that puts out Praxis). But I do know, after reading two first-hand accounts of the Cuban role in Jamaica and Nicaragua in the fall 1980 issue of World Affairs, that the Cuban role in our hemisphere needs greater illumination.

THE ACCOUNT OF THE CUBAN ROLE in Jamaica is written by Edward Seaga, who was elected prime minister of Jamaica in a landslide victory last October over Kristi Michael Manley. It is a frightening tale.

Seaga describes in detail the concerted and widening Cuban subversion effort that went on while Manley's People's National Party was in power. Those efforts included the formation of a political militia, called the Home Guard, which was comprised of supporters of Manley. Fashioned along the lines of the "People's Militia" in Cuba, the Home Guard was armed by Cuba and was responsible for much of the violence that marred last fall's election in Jamaica.

A second Cuban subversion effort included the training of Jamaican youths as Communist brigades in Cuba. Under an arrangement worked out under Manley, Jamaican youths were sent to Cuba, ostensibly to be trained in building skills. Seaga discloses that he obtained a secret party document which divulged that the youths were actually receiving Communist indoctrination. Upon returning to Jamaica, they were to form paramilitary brigades and carry out the work of indoctrination in the countryside.

Michael Monson

SEAGA TELLS US HOW Cubans were involved in the training of the Jamaican Special Branch, the intelligence unit of the police force. He notes an agreement signed between Jamaica and the Soviet Union to provide technical assistance in the training of political activists. Seaga observes that the Cuban ambassador to Jamaica had previously occupied a post in Cuba's government responsible for subversion in the Americas.

Cuba's goal is to... "set up Marxist regimes in place of democratic governments," Seaga writes, and he speaks with experience.

An account of the Cuban role in Nicaragua comes from Alphonso Robelo, an active participant in the 1979 revolution that overthrew the dictatorship of Anastasio Somoza. Robelo, leader of the Nicaraguan Democratic Movement, and an original member of the governing junta, writes of how the Marxist Frente Sandinista are installing, with Cuban help, a totalitarian state in Nicaragua.

ROBELO'S ACCOUNT is particularly tragic. He describes how he joined the revolution against Somoza after the dictator's forces murdered Joaquin Chamorro, the editor of the newspaper "a Prensa and the conscience of his country, in January of 1978.

In July of 1979, the revolution succeeded and Robelo looked forward to the first democratic elections in the 160 years of Nicaragua's independence. He was to be disappointed.

"The problem was that one of the sectors—the Frente Sandinista—kept all the weapons," explains Robelo. "Whenever I brought up the point of fixing a date for elections, it was always delayed. And recently, there were even other answers, like saying, before we have elections, we have to prepare all people that don't know how to write or read, make them economically independent and form a revolutionary conscience. I knew what that means. That means having elections when there is only one party, and then the result is 99 to one. That's not an election."

THOSE ELECTIONS HAVE BEEN put off until 1985, it should be noted. Over 2,500 Cuban advisors are in Nicaragua today, according to Robelo, and because of the technical and administrative inexperience of the Sandanistas, the Cubans make most of the decisions.

Other totalitarian tools are being put into place. Defense committees are being set up every two or three blocks to pass orders from the Sandanistas. The Sandanistas control all television and radio stations and most of the newspapers. A massive literacy campaign is being conducted by 1,200 Cuban teachers, and along with the lessons, peasants are getting Marxist indoctrination.

All of which one is unlikely to find in a slanted publication like Praxis.

Inflation's friend: military spending

By Steve Katsch
Student Writer

AS ONE WHOSE political persuasion differs with President Reagan's, even I must agree with him concerning the seriousness of the problem of inflation. No one can doubt that over the past four years, the purchasing power of the average American declined.

But is Mr. Reagan correct to suggest, as his thinly veiled contempt for them did, that "expensive social service programs" are the root cause of deficit spending? Nowhere in his Feb. 5, speech did Mr. Reagan talk of the causes of inflation, other than in the most general sense—"the government spending too much."

I am concerned because to not deal squarely with the causes of deficit spending will mean that cruel experience may be repeated again. Learning so little from our recent past suggests a large vacuum in the new president's thinking—the failure to examine problems through a historical perspective.

LET'S LOOK AT SOME figures on where the federal government actually spent its money. From 1946 to 1950, America spent more on defense than in the period of full-scale war, 1940-1945. Since World War II, defense spending, as a percentage of total federal spending, has never declined to the pre-World War II levels of around 20 percent. The average 1945-1980 figure would be around 40 percent, especially including Korea and Vietnam. In 1966, America spent $3 billion on the "War On Poverty", and some $60 billion on the defense (including Vietnam).

A basic cause of the huge budget deficits we face today was the financing of the war in Vietnam. America experienced 12 consecutive years, under three "fiscal conservative" presidents from both parties. One conclusion of the pyramiding record deficits of the Johnson-Nixon-Ford years is that a politically unpopular war is much easier to finance by merely turning on the printing presses. Temporarily at least, these costs can remain hidden from the people.

SMALL WONDER, THEN, that none of these discredited leaders made the honorable move to ask Congress for higher taxes or war bond authority to finance Vietnam. Who in their right mind would want that political albatross dangling around his neck? But Americans should not be fooled by this deficit budget mickey-mouse that threatens stable life for those millions of us on fixed incomes. Because we're paying for that $30 billion fiasco in Southeast Asia every day.

For Mr. Reagan to build a favorable consensus for his policies, he must spell out clearly what caused our problems. He must deal squarely with the historical facts behind our deficit spending. He must not switch on the printing presses as a means to "re-arm" America, as in the past.

Americans want the truth: We know a government decides its priorities by where it spends its money; we need someone who speaks the truth on such matters. Let's hope President Reagan has a broader knowledge about our recent history than he displayed Thursday evening.

Three student candidates stay in Carbondale council race

By Tony Gordon
Staff Writer

ALC- They had originally decided to withdraw from the Feb. 24 primary election for Carbondale City Council. David Colombo and Lamar Zabielski both said Thursday they intend to remain in the race.

Colombo and Zabielski were among six candidates who filed petitions with the city clerk to have their names placed on the ballot before Dec. 15, the last day for filing. The original date for candidates to withdraw their names from the ballot was Dec. 31, and all six remained committed to the election at that time.

In addition to Colombo and Zabielski, council incumbents Charles Watkins and Archie Jones, Undergraduate Student Organization President Paul Matalonis and graduate student Matt Coulter are candidates in the primary.

Colombo and Zabielski decided to withdraw after Jan. 1. Colombo said Thursday he thought his job as a librarian and media director at Piquetteville High School would conflict with the "25 to 30 hours per week" he would need to run his campaign for the council. Zabielski, one of three students in the campaign, said in early January he thought the three student candidates would split votes between them and negate any chance of one being elected. Two four-year terms on the council are at stake in this year's general election, to be held April 7.

The deadline for candidates to withdraw was extended by the city to Feb. 9 in late January, and City Clerk Janet Vaught said she expected Colombo and Zabielski would file to withdraw because both had told her they wanted their name's off the ballot. Late Monday, after the deadline had expired, she said neither had taken any action through her office.

Colombo said Thursday he had reconsidered withdrawing because he "didn't like the idea of the two incumbents having a shoe-in to the seats."

"After I had decided to withdraw, I took a look at the other candidates and saw they were not saying much about the issues. I've heard nothing in public from either Coulter or Matalonis, so I decided to stay in the race because there are issues that need to be discussed," Colombo said.

County warned of increasing deficit

By Scott Casen
Staff Writer

The Jackson County Board will probably tally a $400,000 deficit this year, Douglas Eriksen, finance committee chairman, revealed Wednesday at the board's monthly meeting.

Eriksen said the county is spending about 20 percent more in funds than it is collecting from taxes and federal revenue sharing.

He said he will hold a meeting with county officers next week and urge them to hold down spending to ease the budget crunch.

"I'm not sure they know we have a budget problem," Eriksen said. "Our budget problems are worse than those of the state or federal government."

The county needs to hold back on spending wherever possible, Eriksen told the board. He said that a large part of the county's budget comes from Comprehensive Employment Training Act funds.

In other business, the board agreed to pay William Schwartz, former state's attorney, $6,695.45 for his work as special prosecutor in the theft and official misconduct trial of Sheriff Don R. White last December.

The board also approved a motion that will allow it to look for a new courthouse and jail site. The court had earlier planned on buying a lot in downtown Murphysboro. However, it had to revise their plans when Harry Browdy, Murphysboro city councilman, filed a lawsuit charging that the site was illegal because it was too close to a school district office and in violation of state law.

SIU-C is still a party school, say alumni

By Dave Murphy
Staff Writer

CARBONDALE AND SIU-C have undergone many changes in the last 10 years. The construction of Fanner Hall in 1972, the construction of a law school building this year and the destruction of part of the downtown to build a new train station have all changed the physical appearance of the area.

One thing that hasn't changed, according to some SIU-C alumni and Carbondale residents, is SIU-C's image as a party school. But while that image has stuck with the school, the appearance of the town and the attitudes of the students who party here have changed considerably.

"It was known as a party school when I came here, but it's totally different now," according to Tim Meighan, 25, a resident of Carbondale and former SIU student. "For one thing, there used to be a lot of student housing on Illinois Avenue, and there were fewer bars there."

Meighan moved to Carbondale in 1971 and attended classes at SIU-C until 1974. He then quit school and has been living and working in Carbondale ever since. The way students party at SIU has changed greatly since he got here, Meighan says.

"AS FAR AS partying goes, there were always a lot of drugs here," Meighan said. "People used to have a lot more parties in the streets then, though. A lot of times there were concerts in the parking lot behind 710 Bookstore sponsored by local merchants, and nothing like that goes on anymore."

The fact that there were fewer bars on Illinois Avenue in the early 1970s was part of the reason people used to gather in the streets more frequently, according to Meighan.

"The American Tap used to be a house, and Gatsby's was a pool hall that wasn't allowed to serve liquor. People didn't have as many places to go, so on warm nights they would just gather in the streets and party," he said.

Meighan feels that SIU-C's image as a party school is partly due to more lenient academic standards than other Illinois schools.

"This and the University of Illinois are the two biggest schools in the state. People party at U of I too, but they flunk them out right away up there," he said. "Here you can party and skate through your classes with C's and I's."

THE ATTITUDES OF students toward education have also changed since the 1970s, according to Meighan.

"People in the early '70s had a stronger sense of the absurd," he said. "That's changed a lot because of the times. Kids now look at the concrete things, like what kind of a job they're going to get. Before, they were here to learn about life, not make a living."

Gordon Pruett, a 28-year-old graduate student in film history, came to SIU in the spring of 1971. After attending school "in spurts," he received his undergraduate degree in 1979. Like Meighan, he had heard of SIU-C's image as a party school before he arrived.

"It's had that image since maybe the mid-1960s," he said. "I think it still has the image of a party school, and it probably always will. That kind of a thing is very hard to shake."

Pruett also feels that the downtown has changed greatly since he arrived, and he cited the addition of several bars to Illinois Avenue.

"THERE USED TO be fewer bars when I first came here," he said. "The two big competing bars used to be the Golden Gruntlet, which is now TJ McFly's, and Bonaparte's Retreat, which is now the Second Chance."

Carbondale's famous Halloween celebration is a relatively new development also, according to Pruett.

"When I got here, Halloween wasn't that big," he said. "That just happened in the last few years. It just exploded in 1978, when Halloween, Homecoming and a Bob Dylan concert all fell on the same weekend."

Pruett also feels that SIU-C's image as a party school is due in part to its academic standards.

"I think, for instance, that students party as much at U of I, but they have more stringent academic standards," he said. "There is also a larger graduate student population, which helps to balance out the image."

Like Meighan, Pruett feels that the attitudes of students toward their education have changed greatly since his first days here.

"THERE'S MORE CONCERN now, naturally, with money and jobs," he said. "There has been a loss of innocence. Flower children have been replaced by business majors."

Doug Diggle, 37, is the manager of Old Town Liquors. He first came to SIU-C in 1968 and received a degree in mathematics. Diggle, who was student body president for the 1973-74 school year, said SIU-C was famed as a party school when he first arrived.

Playboy rating is just a fallacy

By Karen Gulle
Focus Editor

STUDENTS BRAG ABOUT it to their friends back home. SIU-C administrators blame the University's party school reputation on it. Some Carbondale residents say it's the worst thing to happen to the city since the school opened.

It's the most pervasive and enduring fallacy ever to be handed down through SIU-C's history.

What is it? It's the famous Playboy party school survey that allegedly named SIU-C as the No. 2 party school in the nation. The survey, which appeared in the September 1968 issue of Playboy, has probably done more for the party school image than Halloween and "Burned Out in Carbondale" put together.

Ironically, SIU didn't even make the survey. The University isn't even in the top 25.

THE ARTICLE, "A swingers guide to academe," cited 25 schools which were specially selected to represent a cross section of the nation's colleges. Schools included the University of Wisconsin in Madison, University of California at Berkeley, Harvard, Duke, Princeton and Syracuse Universities, Oberlin College in Oberlin, Ohio and Beloit College in Beloit, Wis. South Carolina was included in the survey. SIU-C wasn't mentioned.

If you were convinced that Playboy recognized SIU-C as a top party school, you weren't alone. Playboy receives dozens of inquiries about the article from colleges every year. The magazine denies that it ever published a survey, but the myth continues to live on, not only at SIU-C but at a number of other colleges and universities.

Students at the University of Florida in Gainesville, for instance, think that their school was No. 1. So do students at the University of Arizona at Tempe. Students at Western Illinois University in Macomb think that they were rated No. 3 and Western, like SIU-C, isn't even in the survey.

SO WHAT ARE THE TOP party schools in the country? Well, according to Playboy in 1968, the University of Wisconsin in Madison was No. 1; the male-female ratio on campus was 5 to 4 and beer was served at the student union. No. 2 was University of California at Berkeley, with the campus ambience termed "anarchy." No. 3 on Playboy's list was Bennington College in Vermont, with an A-plus in "official attitude" and a 1 to 38 ratio between males and females.

The only Illinois school to make the survey was the University of Chicago. It was rated No. 11, after Harvard-Radcliffe in Massachusetts, with an A in "official attitude" and a 3 to 2 ratio between men and women. The availability of women was termed "excellent."

And you thought you went to one of the most famous party schools in the nation! What a joke: SIU-C isn't even in the top. Well, now you can write home and tell mom and dad to relax. It was just a vicious rumor.

"It sure did have a big reputation back then," he said. "And the students deserved their reputation as partiers, too, that's for sure."

Diggle feels that the appearance of more bars in Carbondale made the student body more controlled.

"There weren't near as many bars on the strip then," Diggle said of his first years here. "And, if anything, the bars have made it less of a party school. The streets used to always be taken over by students, and that hardly ever happens anymore."

DIGGLE FEELS THAT students here have become more passive in the last decade.

"Student attitudes have changed a lot," he said. "There used to be a lot of doers, now everyone's a spectator. People watch and no one does."

Joel Ayers first enrolled at the school in 1974. He has attended school sporadically, and is now studying computer science. Ayers feels that students and the administration have grown more conservative in the last few years.

"It was really wild when I first got here, but it seems like the school may have gone a little more academic," he said. "I remember my mom didn't want me to come down here because of its image, but it seems like the atmosphere has calmed down a little."

Ayers feels that the antiwar protests staged by SIU-C students in the late 1960s and early 1970s may have contributed to the school's image.

"It was more of a 'protest and party school back then," he said, "but all of that was more or less over by the time I got here."

Article: SIU-C deserves party image

Editor's note: The following excerpts are from Lynn Emmerman's "Burned Out in Carbondale" which appeared in the April 1979 issue of Chicago magazine. The article called SIU-C "the biggest party school in the state."

"They huddled in the dark, crowded room like river rats. A dozen blue-jeaned college freshman fill two lumpy dormitory beds and overflow onto the floor. They stare at a big color television console playing silently in the corner. Hard rock from the stereo blasts off the walls.

"During a commercial break, a pudgy, red-haired girl pulls a cellophane packet of pills from her pocket, pops one into her mouth, and passes them on. Her boyfriend sits on the edge of a bed, a record album balanced on his knees. He's rolling tonight's communal lid of grass into joints..."

"Every night at Southern Illinois University, ten or so Wilson Hall dormitory kids gather in room 302B (not the real number) to get high and joke about the 'terrible' dinner they've just been served or the 'mindless' classes they rarely attend...room the halls at night and you'll find similar bashes on each of its four floors. Stereo music echoes in the corridors. Marijuana smoke and the sickly sweet scent of poppers (amyl nitrate) leak out from under the doors..."

"...SIU is Illinois' foremost party school...in Carbondale it's easier to take a dive, easier to fluff off and still get passing grades, easier to wind up hanging out on the street without the degree that you came for..."

"...I came to Carbondale expecting plenty of good times. I didn't realize that most of my classes would be a rehash of high school or that the lush, wooded campus that looked so inviting in the catalogue would turn into a rapist's haven after dark..."

Police: Students' use of drugs has diminished in last decade

By Andrew Strang
Staff Writer

Along with the apparent fading of SIU-C's party school image, certain "habits" of SIU-C students, such as the use of "hard" drugs and street parties on South Illinois Avenue, are also disappearing.

Based on police records, the use of heroin in Carbondale has decreased considerably in the last 10 years. In 1980, no arrests for the possession or sale of heroin were reported, according to the Southern Illinois Enforcement Group, an undercover police agency that deals solely with illegal drugs.

But in the early 1970s, large amounts of drugs in Carbondale prompted C. Lowell Southern, the director of the narcotics division of the Illinois Bureau of Investigation, to call Carbondale and SIU-C "one of the major drug traffic centers in the United States."

Police confiscated about 100 pounds of marijuana in 1970 at a farmhouse near Makanda. In 1973, federal agents arrested an SIU-C student for producing a hallucinogen, phencyclidine (PCP), in a laboratory in Cambria, about five miles east of Carbondale. A raid of the laboratory netted 300,000 specimens of PCP, with an estimated street value of $300,000, according to Floyd Beechamp of the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration.

Other major drug-related events in the 1970s included:

- the discovery of one pound of heroin in a Carterville house in 1973,
- the discovery of 50 pounds of marijuana lying on the ground on Lake Road, east of Carbondale, in 1973,
- the recovery of 260 pounds of marijuana in a raid at Carbondale Mobile Homes trailer park in 1976,
- the arrest of two SIU-C students in Florida for allegedly smuggling 2.5

pounds of cocaine into the United States,

—the issuance of a warning by Synergy that 200,000 pills in Carbondale that were supposed to be Quaaludes were giving bad reactions to users.

In addition, in 1973 an SIU-C student was convicted in a Jackson County court for armed robbery after he robbed two other SIU-C students of six pounds of marijuana in a dormitory room.

The availability and use of hard drugs in the Carbondale area prompted the formation of many drug crisis programs. Those programs included Synergy, formed in 1970, the Drug Information and Crisis Center, also formed in 1970, Carbondale Action Now, a community group formed in 1970 which helped drug users, the Alcohol and Drug Enforcement Center, formed in 1972, and SIEG, formed in 1974 to better coordinate efforts of local police agencies dealing

Graduate placement not affected by label

By Dan Sikars
Staff Writer

Party school, party town. But what happens when the party's over?

Does SIU-C's allegedly tarnished reputation have any adverse effects on the employability of its graduates? The consensus of placement personnel and re-recruiters is that it doesn't.

Larry Crouch, placement coordinator for SIU-C, feels that the University's negative reputation has been blown out of proportion.

"I've never talked to a recruiter or employer who has had a negative comment about our graduates," Crouch said. "In fact, just the opposite is the usual reaction."

Crouch said that SIU-C attracts over 700 recruiters every semester, plus over 150 for Career Day.

Despite the fact that Carbondale is out of the way for most recruiters and isn't near any metropolitan area, Crouch said that SIU-C has more recruiters than other schools of comparable size.

"The quality and talent is here. We get calls from all over the country for our students. Recruiters actively seek out our graduates," Crouch said.

Part of the reason for this is that the party image is more than offset by the quality of instruction offered here, Crouch said.

"I've been involved with placement offices with several other universities and the academic quality here is as high or higher than most," he said. "SIU-C has over 90 departments rated in the top ten nationally and two or three that are among the best in the nation."

At the Government Career Day last week, many of the recruiters expressed satisfaction with the quality of SIU-C graduates.

Steve Hunter, recruiter for the Illinois Department of Mental Health, has a high opinion of SIU-C graduates.

"I prefer to come to SIU-C, more so than any other state school, including the University of Illinois," Hunter said. "The potential graduates here seem more prepared academically and in general. They definitely have the expertise and the experience. They seem more well-rounded. I don't know if that's because they have a more active social life, but apparently it doesn't hurt."

Harlan Mendenhall,

placement director of journalism, doesn't think SIU-C's party school reputation is unique. "All universities have a reputation for partying," he said. Many people feel that the 1979 Chicago magazine article "Burned Out in Carbondale" See JOBS page 13

'Party school' reputation more image than reality, says Somit

By Mike Anton
and Randy Roguski
Staff Writers

When it comes to SIU-C's reputation as a party school, President Albert Somit thinks the University is rather sedate.

"When I first came here I was frankly surprised that there still was a college where they don't sell alcohol on campus," Somit said.

The University's reputation as a party school, popularized by an article which supposedly appeared in Playboy, appears to be more myth than reality, Somit said. Other University administrators tend to agree.

"I've been on a lot of other campuses, and the party image here is definitely more image than substance," Bruce Swinburne, vice president for student affairs, said.

SIU-C may be known as a party school, but both Somit and Swinburne said it's hard to tell what effects the reputation has on recruitment and the overall image of the University.

"I've heard admissions people say that we lose some students because of it, and we get others because of our reputation," Somit said. "I don't know if that is bad. You can make your own judgements about that."

Small laundry fire sends smoke into hospital wards

CHICAGO (AP) — A small fire in the basement of the laundry building of the Cook County Hospital Thursday sent smoke into some of the patient wards but caused no injuries, hospital officials said.

The fire was struck out about an hour after it set off the hospital's alarms about 3 p.m. CST, said night administrator Larry Robinson.

He said firefighters were investigating the cause of the blaze.

Somit said the string of bars that make up "the Strip" and Carbondale's annual Halloween celebration most likely generate the party reputation.

"I heard a story once about how parents would come down here to see how the campus and the town looked and they would end up yanking their kids off the street once they saw five bars lined up next to each other on Illinois Avenue," Somit said.

Administrators agree, however, that even if the University lives up to its image, it becomes a secondary issue if academic credentials are sound. They say that promoting the University's educational opportunities will divert attention away from partying and focus it on academics.

Jerry Lacey, associate vice president for university relations, said SIU-C has a good academic reputation. Lacey added that it's not all bad to have a predominance of parties at a university. He said students are at the age when they should be able to have a good time while they're in school.

While SIU's party reputation may hurt the overall image of the University, Cancellor Kenneth Shaw agreed that in the end it really doesn't matter as long as academic standards are kept high. He added that he wasn't even sure if the school's reputation is all that it's cracked up to be.

Student-turned-brass hat says there's less antagonism now

By Scott Canan
Staff Writer

"You are a student. You are also a human being. Contrary to the opinion held by the administrators of this university, the two terms are not mutually exclusive."

Could the man who used the above campaign statement 10 years ago in his quest for the SIU-C student body presidency be a University administrator today? Yes.

Tom Busch, assistant to the vice president for student affairs, attended SIU-C from 1963 to 1971, years that were marked by the peace movement, campus unrest and an adversary relationship between students and the University administration. It was also during these years that SIU-C gained its party school reputation.

Busch says that SIU-C no longer deserves a party school reputation. A politically active student during the early 1970s, Busch also says that relations between students and the University administration have improved markedly since 1970.

"I think we have a better working relationship now than 10 years ago, although I'm looking at it from an administrator's perspective now," said Busch.

He said there is less antagonism between students and the administration today. That

Tom Busch now sits in an administrative seat, but 10 years ago, when the University was gaining its reputation as party school, he was a politically active student at SIU-C.

may be partly due to the fact that the University had greater control over students' social lives 10 years ago.

"If the school found out an underage student had been drinking, he was put on probation," Busch said. "If they caught him a second time he was kicked out of school. I think the improved relationship comes from treating students more as adults."

When he was a senior, Busch planned on moving back to Champaign (his hometown) and opening a contracting firm. But he took a staff position at the student relations office while working on his graduate degree in academic administration and eventually worked his way into an administrative post.

Busch said that the drug culture in Carbondale contributed to the school's party image in 1970.

Students use more drugs, says Synergy

By Dan Sitars
Staff Writer

Is STU-C as big a party school as ever? If drug use is any indication, then the answer, according to one drug counselor, is definitely yes.

"There's more drug use today than ever before, maybe 3 to 5 times more than 10 years ago," said Bill Vollmer, out-patient counselor of Synergy, STU-C's crisis intervention center.

"Grass consumption in Carbonate can be measured by the ton on an annual basis. Any Friday or Saturday night on the Strip, generally 2 out of 3 people are under the influence of some type of illicit drug," Vollmer said. "It still focuses around marijuana, as in the the past, but there's rapidly increasing use of stimulants—coke and speed. And the use of acid has made a comeback in the last few years. It's use has never been greater."

But there is definitely a shift in the reasons for increased drug use among students, Vollmer said.

"With cocaine, it's partly due to the rise of the 'nouveau riche.' People are willing to spend a wad on getting high, buying an ounce and throwing a party. There is also an element of egotism involved, people trying to impress each other. Ten years ago there was a definite drug culture, but it revolved around different values, more spiritual, more laid back. Today people use drugs in a self-motivated way, to deal with personal problems."

This is evident in the way hallucinogens are used today as compared to 10 years ago, he said.

"People used to do acid in huge doses," Vollmer said. "Five hundred milligrams was not uncommon. Today the dosage is smaller—25 to 50 mikes is the normal dose."

distinct difference in the average drug users today. He said they are experienced, sophisticated and market-wise. But despite the apparent sophistication of the average drug user, Vollmer still sees serious problems arising from drug use and abuse.

"You see people affected by drugs today that you wouldn't normally think would be. Drug use is very widespread, more so than ever before in history," he said. "There are less accidental problems, overdoses and such, but more long term effects. People that think they have their act together start doing too much coke and lose it."

Part of the reason for this, according to Vollmer, is the feeling among drug users that they can control themselves.

"It's the subtlety of these drugs, their seductiveness, that causes the problems," he said. "People are going snow-blind over coke and over-amping on speed and are not even aware of it."

had a negative effect on the University, but both Crouch and Mendenhall said the effects of the article have been blown out of proportion.

"The article hurt us, but only for maybe three months," Mendenhall said. "Most people realize that it was just a piece of yellow journalism."

Crouch agreed, saying that the article could have been written about any college town. Every university has a local reputation for partying, he said.

"Here at Southern, the quality of education more than compensates for that," Crouch said. "The bottom line is that our graduates get the jobs."

Individuals determine SIU's party reputation, students say

By Bill Turley
Staff Writer

SIU-C students apparently think they attend a party school, but if you ask them if there's too much partying, they say it depends on the individual.

Bill Maurey, junior in engineering, said he heard SIU-C was a party school before he came to study here.

"I went to Arizona State University on a visit last year and the people there consider themselves the biggest parties, second only to Carbondale. The word gets around about Carbondale," Maurey said. "But I wouldn't trade this school for another."

Maria Robinson, sophomore in accounting, said SIU-C is a party school "only if you make it. It's up to the individual to make it so."

Robinson said she thought SIU-C had a party reputation in the past and that "the tradition still carries on."

Robinson is from Vergennes, a town about 15 miles from Carbondale. She said many people there don't think of the University as a party haven, but "The people from Chicago think it's a party school." John Laws, junior in technical photography, said, "SIU is like any university. It is a party school."

Laws said there are more parties at SIU-C than at other schools because of easier entrance requirements. But, he said, "Students will party as hard as they want wherever they go."

Vicki Bixner, senior in dental hygiene, said she had heard in high school that Carbondale was a party town.

"There are those that make it a party school. SIU's reputation as a party school is based on past experiences," she said.

Paul Templeton, junior in forestry, said SIU-C doesn't deserve its party image anymore.

"It had the reputation, but not any more. Even Halloween is toning down," Templeton said. "I'm in my third year here and it was a lot wilder when I was a freshman."

The atmosphere on campus is more regulated now, Templeton said.

"The Carbondale City Council's attempt to break up private parties is like a police state," he said.

"When the biggest bugs you've ever seen start splatting against your windshield, you know you're in southern Illinois. Farther south than Louisville, Kentucky, Carbondale is surrounded by narrow two-lane highways that snake through wooded hills, around rivers marshes and run-down farms where hound dogs howl on the front steps and ancient jalopies rust in the yards..."

"...in Carbondale many people take such inconveniences as a way of life. You have to be tough and self-sufficient to make it. Services such as ambulance transportation and police and fire protection barely exist outside of town. Farmers keep fire hoses on hand for emergencies. They've been known to take the law into their own hands when they think the legal process has been too unresponsive."

"...Southern has traditionally managed to snare flashy names, such as (John) Gardner and R. Buckminster Fuller, as temporary resident professors. The regular faculty doesn't enjoy as lofty a reputation. It seems fair to say that many professors are at least as depressed as some of their students..."

"Downtown Carbondale consists of those four blocks of South Illinois Avenue lined with taverns, and it's called 'the Strip.' Every night, kids, cowboys and disco queens wander from bar to bar looking for action. They lounge on curbs, stairways and parked cars, laughing and passing barely hidden joints..."

"PK" is a hangout for local burnouts and junkies who came here to school in the sixties and took one trip too many. Hundreds of these expatriated hippies, wearing sneakers, jeans, tie-dyed shirts and long hair, still haunt South Illinois Avenue, staring at passersby with dark, vacant eyes..."

"...Some of the street people camp in abandoned shacks and caves beyond the city limits..."

"By midnight the dope is so thick in the air that you can catch a buzz just walking down the street. Hundreds of bleary-eyed kids congregate on the sidewalks..."

"Two shakey bikers huddled together behind PK's preparing a different kind of relief. One man heats a rusty spoon over his cigarette lighter. His buddy shields the flame with one hand and with the other reaches for the syringe in his sock..."

"The six-hour drive from Carbondale to Chicago is never easy. The lush country and clean sunshine always make me want to stay. The kitten I adopted during my visit here curls in my lap as I drive. I've been bringing abandoned, aimless creatures home from SIU since 1972. Sometimes they were dogs or cats. Sometimes they were people..."

"Anyone who survives a few semesters here reasonably intact is stronger for the experience. Having to constantly defend your questionable education to Ivy League types or to graduates of Northwestern or the University of Chicago keeps you on your toes. I learned things here that I never could have learned at Harvard. I picked them up in a survival course called South Illinois Avenue..."

Newhouse calls board 'shaken'

CHICAGO (UPI)—Sen. Richard H. Newhouse Jr., D-Chicago, Thursday said the Board of Education is so "shaken" by Mayor Jane M. Byrne's plans to replace two black members that he wonders whether a mandatory desegregation plan can be completed by March.

Newhouse, a potential candidate for mayor in 1983, called Mrs. Byrne's plan "irrational and destructive."

"There may have been some credence to the reputation in the late 1960s or early 1970s, but today I think the academics at this school are as good as any in the state," Busch said.

"The problem now is to convince employers, parents and prospective students that we produce high quality graduates," he said. "Job placement is the key to that."

Busch admits the party school reputation was not totally unfounded 10 years ago. He said when he was an undergraduate, there was a group of people known as "street people." They were former students who had dropped out of school or had just taken time off from their studies.

"There has always been sort of a laid-back type of lifestyle here and the street people epitomized it," Busch said. "Drugs were a part of the whole thing."

Busch said underground publications played a role in Carbondale as the place to come for a good time.

"Because of that, a misadventure built up about Carbondale," he said. "In those days some people felt that had to be where things were happening. I think that drew a lot of people here who were into drugs."

The drug culture still exists around the University today, Busch said.

"Drugs are used in a more sophisticated manner today," said Busch. "I think some students feel that this is the only time in their lives they can let loose and whoop it up a little."

While he feels that student-administration relations have improved and SIU-C's party school may be subsiding, Busch said he still sees room for improvement.

"There is still a reluctance on the part of the administration to trust students to work on projects and follow through," he said.

with illegal drugs.

Of the drug crisis programs formed in the early 1970s, only Synergy and SIEG are still operating.

The overflowing of students and resulted closings of South Illinois Avenue almost every Friday and Saturday night has also ended, Tom McNamera, assistant to the police chief, said. In 1974, the police put 12 men on foot patrol in the South Illinois Avenue area to help deal with the large number of people who would be there on weekends and to try to put an end to the closing of the street. Many students would go to the

"the Strip" on weekends and force the closing of the street, McNamera said.

South Illinois Avenue was closed down for the 1979 and 1980 Halloween celebrations, but for the most part, "the Strip" hasn't been closed down in the past few years because of overcrowding.

In 1971, police were making 20 arrests a weekend for underage drinking in the bars on South Illinois Avenue, although the arrests were made by police officers whose primary task was to try to keep the street from being closed off, according to a story in the Oct. 10,

Carter warehouse to be sold in near future

ATLANTA (AP) — The Plains, Ga., peanut warehouse owned by former President Jimmy Carter's family is likely to be sold in the next two months, according to Carter trustee Charles Kirbo.

Kirbo, an Atlanta attorney and close friend of the former president, said he hopes to be "closing (the sale) in 30 to 60 days."

Kirbo, who was to meet with Carter at his law office Thursday, commented in an interview with The Atlanta Journal.

He declined to identify the prospective buyer, but the Journal said the most likely purchaser is Archer Daniels Midland, a major grain processing company headquartered in Decatur, Ill.

ADM Vice President Dick Burket, contacted at the company's headquarters, said, "We're looking at some peanut properties in Georgia," and added that the Carter warehouse "is one that is under consideration."

He said he did not know when a decision might be made.

ADM is the nation's No. 1 producer of fuel alcohol from corn and makes corn sweeteners and texturized vegetable protein from soybeans. It also operates grain elevators, a sugar refinery, a flour company and a fleet of railroad cars. Its 1980 net earnings were $115 million.

Kirbo said the sale will not be completed until a blind trust set up to handle Carter's business affairs during his term in office is dissolved.

During that process, he said, the Carter trust will purchase brother Billy Carter's 15 percent interest in the warehouse.

Kirbo, who has been trying to sell the warehouse for several years, purchased an option to buy Billy Carter's share.

GSC passes recommendation on library facility construction

By Carol Knowles
Staff Writer

Realizing the dream of a $10 million addition to Morris Library was just that, the Graduate Student Council passed a resolution favoring the immediate construction of a library storage facility at its meeting Wednesday.

In passing the resolution 16-7, council members said the process of assigning materials to the storage facility should be an ongoing process based on material use with input from both students and faculty.

Some students said they thought microfiche would be a viable alternative to the overcrowding problem because more material could be stored in a smaller space than the variety of books presently shelved in the library.

Paul Schlieve, GSC representative to the library affairs committee, told the council the possibility of using microfiche had been looked into, but the cost of converting materials to microfiche and purchasing readers would be more than the estimated $5 million to build a storage facility.

Morris Library was planned to shelve one million volumes and to meet the needs of 15,000 students. The library currently houses over 1.5 million volumes, a large government documents collection, special collections, archives, Learning Resources Service, the Self-Instruction Center and is a resource to over 23,000 students.

In other action, the council passed a set of new guidelines for the election of a student trustee 22-0-4. The guidelines must be passed by both the GSC and the Undergraduate Student Organization by a two-thirds margin of those members present at the meeting to be implemented in the election of a student representative to the Board of Trustees.

USO forms student research force

By David Murphy
Staff Writer

A plan to form a student opinion research committee was approved by the Undergraduate Student Organization Student Senate Wednesday, despite vocal opposition from some senators.

The new committee, according to the approved proposal, will use questionnaires, straw polls and other survey methods to determine student opinion on controversial issues. By using a random sample of 300 students, the proposal said, student opinion can be determined with a maximum error rate of 5 percent.

The plan was approved by a vote of 27-6, but some senators voiced doubt about whether such a committee was needed or wanted.

"This idea is an insult," said Bill Johns, an East Side senator. "It's an insult to you senators and your jobs to suggest that you should let a small group of people find out for you what you should be finding out for yourselves. It's asinine."

"As far as determining opinion goes, I'm not sure these surveys are very valid," Sharon Rosenblum, a West Side senator, said. "I'm kind of cynical about this idea, because we should find out how students feel for ourselves. That's our job."

Other senators, however, defended the committee as one way to make them more representative of students.

"As a senator, I want to know as much as possible about everything," Vaughn Filkins, a West Side senator, said.

The senate also approved the establishment of a new committee to study academic affairs. The committee will be composed of senators from various geographical districts and those elected from academic divisions.

The committee, according to the approved proposal, "will deal with all aspects of academic life at the undergraduate level."

Police search for suspect in fatal shootings

EAST ST. LOUIS (AP) — Police are still seeking a second suspect in connection with the fatal shootings of three people and the wounding of a fourth in an apartment last week.

One of the murder suspects, Lee Otis Griffin, 22, was in St. Clair County jail Wednesday. Police said Griffin was charged with attempted murder, armed violence and aggravated assault in connection with the shooting of Charles Kellick, 37, of East St. Louis, the lone survivor of the four shootings.

Kellick viewed a videotaped lineup Monday from his bed in St. Louis University Hospitals and identified Griffin as one of the two men who shot him and killed three other persons Feb. 5, police said.

Killed were Ronald Walker, 20, of Pasadena Hills, Mo.; and Kristi Lee "Snow" Smith and Charles "Chio" Sims, both of East St. Louis.

Authorities believe the killings were drug-related after a quantity of drugs and drug paraphernalia were found with the bodies in Miss Smith's apartment.

Conservatives warn of threats to U.S. security

By Mike Shanahan
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A conservative group, hoping to re-establish a House internal security committee to investigate terrorism in the United States, is claiming that "trained Communist revolutionaries" were among the 125,000 refugees who immigrated from Cuba last year. A fund-raising letter signed by Rep. Daniel Crane, R-Ill., says President Reagan needs help "in closing America's open door" to bomb-throwers, spies and revolutionaries." He added: "For all we know, terrorists are plotting subversive attacks right under our noses."

Throughout, the letter is sprinkled with references to Reagan's need for a new House committee, though Reagan himself has made no mention of such a need.

The committee would be a successor to HUAC — the House Un-American Activities Committee — the subject of protests that activities such as HUAC's Hollywood blacklist hearings were "witch hunts" that denied Americans their right to free expression.

As a result of mounting criticism, HUAC was renamed the House Internal Security Committee, and eight years ago it was dismantled altogether. Efforts to revive it have failed, but Crane and other conservative activists hope the conservative gains in Congress will open the door to reconsideration.

White House officials would not comment on the fund-raising letter's characterization of the threat to U.S. security posed by terrorists, and deputy press secretary Larry Speakes said Reagan has reached no opinion on whether a new internal security panel is needed.

The Crane letter urged contributions of between $15 and $100 or more with a goal of raising $14,800 to kick off "an anti-terrorism campaign ... because subversive terrorists are coming through America's open door right this minute."

The fund-raising letter says Cuban President Fidel Castro has "sent his trained communist revolutionaries into our country. They were hidden among the thousands of Cubans escaping Castro's bloody regime."

"Castro's agents have already stirred up riots in relocation centers. Burning buildings. Destroying American property."

A new investigative committee should be formed to "give Ronald Reagan the law he needs to close our open door for terrorists," the four page letter said.

Wiley Thompson, a spokesman for the FBI, said it is true that there have been a number of Cuban government agents found among the refugees, but he declined to say how many and he would not comment on the council's allegation that "Castro agents" were responsible for refugees' unrest.

Club meets Friday the 13th to prove superstitions wrong

By Lee Inder
Associated Press Writer

At 8:13 a.m. Friday, members of Philadelphia's Friday the 13th Club will walk under a ladder, eat a breakfast of 13 items, break mirrors, spill salt, open umbrellas, joke about black cats and light three cigarettes on one match. The ceremony will wrap up at 10:13 a.m.

"There's no such thing as bad luck," said Philip Klein, the 74-year-old club president. "People ought to have more courage, show more guts, and do more things, and not hide behind excuses or superstitions."

Klein is a retired newspaper publisher, former college president and city planner who formed the club 45 years ago and is the only original member still active. The club has 13 members and meets every Friday the 13th to give life to the idea of triskaidekaphobia — fear of the number 13.

Those who are superstitious consider Friday the 13th the unluckiest of all days.

But Klein said, "Superstitions relating to 13, or any kind of superstitions, are just silly. They are hangups for people who can't cope with things on their own and can't afford a psychiatrist."

Klein said the Friday the 13th Club "started as a gimmick" in 1936. "I was in the advertising business at the time, and it was a good way to take people to lunch and entertain customers," he said.

The fuss over Friday the 13th, according to some references, stems from the fact that Christ was crucified on Friday, and 13 men were present at the Last Supper. There is also a Viking fable in which 13 gods were invited to a banquet but 13 showed up and one was killed.

"The superstition says that if you must dine on Friday the 13th don't eat with 12 others at the table. Legend says the first or last to rise from the table will die within a year."

Klein's response: "Pure malarkey. It's never happened with us."

World celebrates Valentine's Day

By Christine Swiderski
Student Writer

"In Greece, every day is Valentine's Day," according to George Danakas.

It isn't that the Greeks have a year-around observance of the day on which Americans will give candy, cards and flowers to their hearts' delights but just that, as Danakas expressed it, the people of his homeland tend to think "people shouldn't wait for a certain day to show their loved ones they care."

Americans, of course, aren't likely to argue with that—nor with another observation by Danakas, a sophomore in industrial engineering.

"It's good for those who make money off it," he said.

Other international students asked for their views and reactions to the American version of St. Valentine's Day noted both similarities and differences between the way it's observed here and in their countries.

In Mexico, for instance, only the people in the larger cities take note of the day, said Jesus

L. Escobedo, student in the Center for Study of English as a Second Language.

"The little towns are very traditional and people there don't get involved," he said.

But, he conceded, "in my country, Valentine's Day is a good day. People go out and have a good time."

In Ghana, Africa, there's the same sort of divergence—only it's the elders who don't take much to the Valentine idea and the younger folk who do, according to David Asare, a physics student.

"Those who do get involved have been influenced by Western culture," he said.

In England, said Asare, who also has gone to school there, Valentine's Day is observed in much the same way as in America—with one big difference.

"There people don't sign their names to the cards they send," he said. "All cards are anonymous, so you don't really know who sent them, unless you're going out with someone in particular."

Candidates selected for job study

By Liz Griffin
Staff Writer

Administrative and Professional Staff Council members nominated 18 SIU-C employees Wednesday as possible candidates for the evaluation committee which will examine 75 benchmark positions in a job analysis study.

About 56 more administrative and professional benchmark positions from the Springfield campus will be studied by another committee. The number of Springfield administrative and professionals at Springfield has not yet been determined.

Hay Associates, a Chicago-based management firm, was contracted to match equal pay with equal work among the approximately 450 administrative and professional staff at SIU-C.

Barbara Spears, manager of Personnel Services, said seven of the nominees will be chosen as voting committee members and an additional two non-voting members are to coordinate the group at SIU-C. The committee members are to be selected from a cross section of job responsibility groups. The vice presidents may approve or suggest additions to the list of nominees. SIU-C President Somit also may suggest candidates before he gives the final approval.

The tentative training date of the committee members is March 4, according to Spears.

She said that the job questionnaires should be sent out next week—a week later than the tentative time schedule—to administrative and professional personnel after changes have been made in semantics.

In other business, John Meister's membership in the council was ratified Wednesday. Meister is director of Pollution Control and he replaces Hubert Massey.

National fire officials report 'arson epidemic'

By Timothy Harper
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The fire at the Las Vegas Hilton Hotel was not the only case of arson in the United States on Tuesday. There were 400 others. There will be 400 more today and 400 more tomorrow.

"Arson is an epidemic in this country," said Ed Wall, who teaches investigative techniques at the government's National Fire Academy in Emmetsburg, Md.

Indeed, Americans are setting fire to their homes and businesses, even their cars, in record numbers, prompting new anti-arson efforts by government agencies and private associations.

Yet arson remains one of the toughest crimes for authorities to sniff out. The U.S. Fire Administration said an arsonist has less than one chance in 10 of being arrested, and less than one in 100 of being convicted.

In 1979, the last year for which complete statistics are available, there were 148,500 known cases of arson in this country, and tens of thousands of other fires which may have been started deliberately.

The National Fire Protection Association in Boston said those fires caused 675 deaths, an estimated 10,000 injuries and $1.3 billion in smoke and fire damage. And that does not include the U.S. Forest Service estimate that brush and forest arson cases caused $450 million in damage to the nation's wilderness areas last year.

The U.S. Fire Administration said the average arson caused $9,300 in property damage in 1979, nearly twice that of a non-arson fire. And figures still being compiled for 1980 are undoubtedly higher, authorities said.

Bruce Bogart of the American Insurance Association in New York said reported arson cases have increased by about 25 percent each year of the past decade.

"The biggest increase has been in cars. There were 63,500 cases of arson in automobiles in 1979, up 33 percent," he said. "People have these big old clunkers they can't sell, so they burn 'em up."

Aside from actual damage to structures, Bogart said, arson has the most serious economic "ripple effect" of any crime. He said jobs, income, sales and taxes lost to arson probably total $6 billion to $10 billion a year.

For instance, he said, the loss of several hundred Las Vegas Hilton guest rooms for three months of repairs will probably cost the hotel $6 million just in room fees.

"And what about how many employees who will be laid off?" he asked.

The Las Vegas Hilton fire killed eight people, injured 198 others and caused an estimated $10 million in damage. Philip Bruce Cline, 2, a Hilton room service busboy, has been booked on one count of first degree arson and eight counts of murder.

Winter storms claims 51 lives

Floodwaters churning chunks of ice surged into hundreds of homes in the Northeast on Thursday, and record cold moved in following the winter's meanest storm, a wet and windy killer that contributed to at least 51 deaths.

Thursday was the coldest day of the year in numerous cities from Chicago, where the reading was minus 11 and residents were digging out from under a foot of snow, to Nashville, Tenn., where it was 2 above.

A huge ice jam on the Delaware River sent floodwaters pouring into the twin cities of Port Jervis, N.Y., and Matamoras, Pa., forcing about 4,000 people to flee to emergency shelters.

Columbia University.

Prior to being hired as assistant professor of health and physical education at SIU-C, LeFevre had worked in public school systems as a health educator, and had also been a tennis pro at the Lake Geneva Country Club at Lake Geneva, Wis.

"That was before tennis pros were making money," LeFevre said. "People like Pancho Gonzalez would get their station wagon and drive from town to town playing matches."

LeFevre, 61, has coached only 23 years. He spent three years in South Vietnam as an advisor on elementary education. During that time LeFevre has sent four teams to the NCAA Division I top 20, and in 1972 the Salukis placed in the top 10.

Oddly enough, the high-point of Saluki tennis came in 1964 when LeFevre was still in South Vietnam. That year, SIU-C won the NCAA College Division Championships. Although the players were recruited by LeFevre, the team was led by interim Coach Carl Sexton because LeFevre was in Saigon teaching, and was also advising the 1964 Vietnamese Olympic Team.

The situation has definitely changed from a time in 1965 when the only tennis courts SIU-C had were cinder surfaces and the tennis budget was $700. In 1967 when Salukis hosted the NCAA College Tennis Championships or the then newly-built tennis courts behind the physical plant.

Today those same stands that held the tournament fans in 1967, are gone, rotted away and condemned because students were falling through them.

These days it is getting to be pretty tough playing tennis around SIU-C, LeFevre said.

Central Missouri forfeits cage game at Eastern Illinois

WARRENSBURG, Mo. (AP) — Central Missouri State University basketball coach Lynn Nance said Thursday he hopes a disturbance at Charleston, Ill., will not intimidate his players.

Nance pulled his Mules, ranked third in the NCAA's Division II, off the court with 6:46 remaining in their game at Eastern Illinois University Wednesday night after a brawl broke out between the two teams. The game was declared a forfeit, with EIU ahead 59-61.

Nance said he was incensed over the physical nature of the game.

CMSU officials said the disturbance began when Central's Kevin Fromm was thrown out of bounds by Ricky Robinson of Eastern Illinois after Fromm grabbed a rebound.

John Bruner came off the CMSU bench in defense of Fromm. Ricky Cerkin of Eastern Illinois threw a punch at Bruner and both benches emptied.

Nance ordered his team to leave and they went directly to their hotel where they showered, then returned to Warrensburg.

"I certainly think it could be a factor in the future from the standpoint of intimidation," Nance said Thursday.

SIU-C grad coaches basketball team for deaf

JACKSONVILLE (AP)—The Tigers are rolling again. After six straight winning seasons and a 1980 regional championship, that's nothing unusual for them.

But the Tigers, coached by SIU-C graduate Michael Moore, are not your average high school basketball team. They're from the Illinois School for the Deaf.

Communicating in sign language, the deaf Tigers have compiled an 11-6 record this year—all but one of the games against hearing teams.

There's only one deaf school on the Tigers' 1981 schedule, because it seems Coach Michael Moore can't find many other deaf schools that want to play them. The Tigers simply have gotten too good.

But it hasn't always been that way.

In 1964, a young Moore was fresh out of SIU-C and looking for a physical education teaching job. When his wife got a job at a Jacksonville school, he took a job as a basketball coach at the state's school for the deaf.

Moore had never coached basketball. He didn't yet know sign language. His only experience with a deaf person was the old shoe cobbler in his hometown of Cartersville, with whom he communicated through crude hand signals.

"When I came to the school, they hadn't won a game in almost two years. The first game I coached, I won," said Moore, now 39. "The students nearly tore this place apart, they were so happy. They even carried me off the floor on their shoulders."

"Then we lost 19 in a row," he added with a slight grin.

It was all trial and error for Moore—both in the classroom and on the basketball court. The Tigers won three games the next year, then five. In those first 10 seasons, there was only one winning record—19-0's 19-6 team.

"I had no special training. I didn't know any of the sign language. It was sort of a trial and error thing until I learned it," said Moore.

The Tigers compete in the Illinois High School Association. They ask for—and receive—no special treatment because of their deafness.

How a young person can accumulate $14,100 for education

With the help of the Veterans' Educational Assistance Program, individuals with more determination than dollars can build an educational fund for the future. When they enlist in the Army and save up to $75 a month during their initial enlistment, their savings are matched $2 for $1 by the government. This could add up to $14,100 for college or vocational-technical school when they leave the Army.

They'll start college with a tuition fund, plus a valuable skill, new confidence and the maturity gained in the Army.

Netters to play in ISU Invitational

The Saluki women's badminton team might have to compete without freshman Nancy Little in the Illinois State Invitational at Normal Saturday and Sunday, as the fractured foot that sidelined her early this season is again troubling her.

"I'll rest her if it's acting up and hope she'll be okay for the state championship," Badminton Coach Paul Blair said of Little, who has won the A flight championship in each of the Salukis' last two meets.

Other Salukis who won't compete in the tournament are sophomore Cindi Dietz, who won the C flight last week at Eastern Illinois, and senior Renee Skrzypak. Dietz must attend a family wedding, and Skrzypak has "personal business" to take care of, according to Blair.

"We're going to use some junior varsity players to fill the empty spots," Blair said. "It's going to be a challenge. I think we'll finish anywhere from fourth to seventh."

"We just call a regular ball game. The deaf kids seem to adjust," referee Dick Thompson of Quincy said last week after calling the Tigers' 41-39 loss to Vermont-Ipava-Table Grove.

"I've called their games about six or eight times now. The first time it was kind of unusual for me. The coaches said just call a normal game, so I did," he added.

The loss to VIT was a heart-breaking one for the Tigers, who have been in a slump after a 9-0 start. VIT had taken advantage of the Tigers' deafness, using pressure tactics that frustrated the Tigers because they couldn't communicate on the floor.

"Our game plan usually is to put a lot of pressure on them. It's frustrating for them. It's hard for them to communicate," said VIT Coach Trevor Toland. "The only way they can change a defense is to call time out. It's just like playing any other team. You take advantage of their weakness."

Moore must use sign language to communicate with his players and his assistant coach. It can be frustrating.

"It's frustrating to the point that you just wish you could just yell out there and help them more than you're helping them," he said after the VIF loss. "I'm sure you noticed the hearing coach talking to his players throughout the entire game."

"I can't reach out there and pull their string. I wish I could. That's definitely a handicap," said Moore.

"They (VIT) certainly exploited that tonight. We try to work on that as much as we can. We just try to make the kids aware they do have the handicap, make them aware of what they will try to do in life."

"They have to look at me to get their instructions. They can't play basketball and watch me all the time," he added.

The entire process of coaching and teaching a deaf child requires enormous patience. Deaf children must start from scratch since they don't pick up vocabulary through everyday conversation.

"We don't realize how much we, as hearing people, pick up through osmosis," said Moore. "My 7-year-old daughter, who can hear, probably knows as much vocabulary and language as most of my high school students.

"We have to bring it down to much simpler language. For instance, if I write 'dribble' on the blackboard, they probably don't know that word. I might have to use 'bounce' or just show them what I mean."

Frosh duo boosts young swim team

By Michelle Schwent
Staff Writer

The women's swimming team has made quite a splash in its watery world this season although the team is composed basically of freshmen. Two of those freshmen, Barb Larsen and Pam Ratcliffe, have grabbed their share of the spotlight through their individual contributions to the team.

Larsen, a Mt. Prospect native, has been ranked among the top four college swimmers in butterfly events this year and the top five in freestyle events. She currently holds seven school records and has qualified for the AIAW national meet in eight events. Her accomplishments this year have surprised her since she started out with a goal of qualifying for AIAW nationals in two events. Ratcliffe has been ranked as high as second in the 100-yard breaststroke and sixth in the 200-yard individual medley. She holds six school records and has qualified for the nationals in seven events. Neither swimmer could fathom such ideas at this time last year.

"I didn't think this would happen," Larsen said. "But I like it a lot. We found out about the top ranking times after we came back from Florida over Christmas break. I was happy about it but now every time we look at the rankings, we're a little farther down on the list."

"I didn't even know where I was going to go to school at this time last year," Ratcliffe said. Both swimmers decided upon SIU-C because of Coach Tim Hill's reputation of producing good teams and swimmers. Larsen also heard Ratcliffe had decided on SIU-C.

The swimming duo works as a team in practice and push each other to work hard.

"We will decide to take a set slow but when we get in the water each one of us can't understand why the other one is working so hard," Ratcliffe said.

Hill isn't surprised by the accomplishments of the two freshmen this year.

"I'm not really surprised," Hill said. "They are swimming up to my expectations. They can both be world class level swimmers, if not this year, then next year. Whether they want cope with that is up to them. They should both be up within the top five or six nationally next year."

Both are versatile swimmers and thus valuable to the team.

"Barb could just about win any of the freestyle, fly or IM events I put her in at the state meet," Hill said. "Pam could also win almost any of the events, even the backstroke which is supposed to be her weakest stroke."

Grapplers fall to Sycamores, prepare to host Eastern, LSU

By Rod Furlow
Staff Writer

The Saluki wrestlers were beaten convincingly for the fourth straight time Wednesday at the Arena, dropping a dual meet, 37-6, to Indiana State.

"Their confidence is shaken up a little, and they're really irritated with themselves," Saluki Coach Linn Long said of his wrestlers, who have been overpowered by Oklahoma State, Missouri, Illinois, and the Sycamores, and who will take on Eastern Illinois 7:30 Friday at the Arena and Louisiana State Saturday following the men's basketball game at the Arena.

"Their being irritated with themselves can be a good thing if they don't dwell on it too long," Long said. "They've got nothing to be ashamed of. The teams that have beaten them have all been very tough."

SIU-C is now 7-4. The team's match against Notre Dame was reported as a forfeit, but was actually canceled, giving the Salukis seven wins, not eight. "Tonight we were just outclassed," Long said. "Indiana State was stronger than us, so we should've compensated for the difference in strength with quickness. Only two of our guys did that, and they won their matches."

One of the Saluki winners was Gus Kallai, who won a 14-7 decision in the 156-pound class to raise his season record to 73-7. Early in the second period, Kallai reversed Guy Redinger to increase his lead to 4-1, injuring Redinger's left knee in the process. Redinger managed to make some good moves against Kallai despite his injury.

The other SIU-C win came in the 167-pound class, as Eric Jones won a 10-6 decision over Tim Thomas, giving the few Saluki fans something to cheer about.

"My biggest disappointment tonight was that we reverted to our habits of the past," Long said. "We weren't consistent, and we didn't have the super concentration it takes to be effective. We used quickness spottily, and that's the reason we lost the matches we did."

Losing matches were Jerry Richards in the 119-pound class, Dan Marhanka at 126, Tim Dillick at 134, Dave Holler, 142, who was pinned by Doug Reifstick with 35 seconds left in the match, Mark Harpster at 150, Dan Hemmer at 177, and Mark Heistrom at 190.

Down 31-6 going into the heavyweight match, Long decided to forfeit the final bout.

"Dale (Shea) wanted to wrestle, but their heavyweight (Bruce Baumgarten) is probably the number one heavyweight in the nation," Long said. "I figured we had about one chance in 100 of winning that match, and that there was a 50-50 chance that Dale would get hurt. It just didn't seem smart to let Dale wrestle, because we might need him in our next few meets."

Long sized up the teams that will come to Carbondale for two of those meets, Friday's and Saturday's.

Swimmers seek 10th invitational title

By Mike Anthony
Staff Writer

The Saluki men's swimming and diving team will attempt to capture the 13th annual Saluki Invitational Swimming and Diving Meet Friday, Saturday and Sunday at the Student Recreation Building Pool. SIU-C will be bidding for its ninth straight invitational title.

A total of 306 men and women, representing 12 different schools, will take part in this meet that the SIU-C men's team has won nine times overall.

There are 17 teams, 12 men's teams and five women's teams, that will compete. Seven of the men's teams represent Division I schools, and five of the men's teams are from Division II schools.

The Division I men's teams that will be competing are SIU-C, Bradley, Purdue, Illinois, Illinois State, Eastern Kentucky and Indiana State.

Southeast Missouri, Southwest Missouri, Eastern Illinois, Western Illinois and the University of Missouri at Rolla will be the Division II men's teams competing.

The Division I women's teams that will be participating are SIU-C, Illinois and Indiana State. Eastern Illinois and Southeast Missouri will be the only Division II women's teams competing.

According to the Saluki men's Coach Bob Steele, the coaches of the teams will decide before the meet on Friday whether or not the meet will be scored by divisions or as one whole meet.

Also, they will decide on scoring the men's and women's teams together by schools, or separately.

"I would like to have just one whole meet," Steele said, "but I think the men and women should be scored separately because some teams didn't bring their women's teams with them."

According to Steele, there is no doubt in his mind about the outcome of the meet.

"We'd have to be picked to win," he said, "because we have more depth and more outstanding people than the other teams."

Steele added that Purdue and Illinois will provide "most of the competition" to the Salukis, although the other teams also have outstanding swimmers.

The Salukis have six out of the top eight seeds in the 100-yard freestyle competition, "but it probably won't stay that way," Steele said.

Saluki Captain Pat Looby is seeded No. 1 in the 100-yard freestyle, and Salukis Conarado Porta, Keith Armstrong and John Fischer are seeded second, third and fourth, respectively. Looby is also seeded No. 1 in the 50-yard freestyle event.

Steele said that for this meet, he has divided his squad into "two teams." One team is training as usual, preparing for the Salukis' next dual meet against Iowa, and the other is rested and shaved in order to swim times that will get them on the SIU-C team that will travel to the National Independent Championships in South Carolina, March 6-8.

The Salukis are allowed to take 18 members, including divers, to the meet, and have filled 17 spots. Duke Chaney, Mike Lloyd, Dave June, Jerry Kendall and Tom Robl will be vying for the final position.

According to Saluki Diving Coach Dennis Golden, SIU-C's Rick Theobald is "probably the strongest diver" competing, and he is the only All-American diver in the meet.

On Friday night, the competition starts at 5 p.m. On Saturday, the preliminary events start at 11 a.m., and the finals begin at 7 p.m. On Sunday, preliminary events begin at 10 p.m. and the finals start at 3 p.m.

Point guard to lead Buffs vs. cage team

By Scott Stahmer
Associate Sports Editor

West Texas State's men's basketball team is proof that good things come in small packages.

The Buffaloes' top player is point guard Terry Adolph, a first-team all-Missouri Valley Conference selection last year. Adolph is just 5-9, but that hasn't stopped him from leading the nation in assists—8.9 per game—and averaging 17.4 points.

Adolph had 25 points, 14 assists, nine rebounds and nine steals in the Buffs' 108-63 win over SIU-C Jan. 19 in Amarillo. And, if the Salukis are to end their 13-game losing streak against WTSU Saturday night at the Arena (7:35 p.m. tipoff), it's imperative for them to neutralize him.

"He's truly one of the most exciting guards in the country," Saluki Coach Joe Gottfried said. "We ought to let every kid under 5-7 in free to watch him play. It's going to be tough stopping him."

Despite Adolph's efforts, the Buffaloes were a disappointing eighth in the Valley, 3-8, and 12-9 overall going into Thursday's game at Indiana State. While WTSU has had no problem scoring, averaging 82 points per game in Valley play, the Buffs' shaky defense has allowed 86.

The Buffaloes' other starters Saturday will be George Holt, Eddie Harris, Eurskine Robinson and a freshman with possibly the MVC's best name, Goliath Yeggins.

Robinson, Holt and Harris have double-figure scoring averages, at 11.2, 11 and 10.3 respectively. Yeggins is the leading rebounder among the starters, 5.8 per game.

The probable starters for the Salukis, 0-12 in the Valley and 7-15 overall, are Rod Camp at center, Duane Jones and Jac Clatti at forwards and Rob Kirsner and Johnny Fayne at guards. Camp, SIU-C's leading scorer at 15.2 per game, had a career-high 30 in Monday's 81-61 loss to Wichita State.

"He's been our most consistent player every night," Gottfried said. "Rod has been one player you know is going to get about the same numbers every game."

West Texas State Coach Ken Edwards likes to fast-break offensively and use the press defensively.

SIU-C's only remaining home game after Saturday will be Feb. 28 against Drake.

Spotlight misses 26-year tennis coach

By Greg Walsh
Staff Writer

Most tennis coaches get little recognition because they generally stay out of the spotlight of a sport that is usually not in the college sports spotlight itself.

That may explain why most of the university populace only knows SIU-C men's tennis Coach John Richard LeFevre as simply another coach.

He quietly goes about his business recruiting top players from around the world and rounding up top tennis squads from around the country to play the Salukis, trying to make SIU-C a "respectable tennis university."

It has been the same thing the past 26 years for the man who is well known in the world of tennis.

LeFevre has become an important figure on the national college tennis scene, although it has been nine years since players like New Zealander Graham Snook and Australian Bill Lloyd led LeFevre's team to a 10th-place finish in the NCAA finals.

In the past eight years, LeFevre became a member of the executive committee of the Intercollegiate Tennis Coaches of America, which he acknowledged "is one of the most prestigious awards in tennis."

In addition, he also sits on the Wilson Sporting Goods committee that selects the college coach of the year. He gets free box seats to the U.S. Open every year, and acts as an escort to the coach of the year and his wife.

"That is really exciting

because we get to go down on the court right after the women's championships to give the coach of the year award, and you get to see 16,000 people going crazy," LeFevre said.

LeFevre is also on the NCAA Tennis Committee, which governs all college tennis in the U.S., and he writes a monthly column for Tennis USA, the official tennis magazine.

But most of LeFevre's attention still revolves around the SIU-C tennis program. LeFevre said there is no LeFevre method of teaching tennis when it comes to individual players because each should have the necessary skills by the time he reaches the college level.

It is the doubles teams where LeFevre said his coaching is needed.

"It is a matter of personality how doubles players play together," LeFevre said. For example, he has just made a switch in his doubles teams. No. 3 team Guy Hooper and Brian Stanley, and No. 4 team David Filer and John Grife will no longer be interchanged, with Hooper Grife at No. 2 and Stanley and Filer going to No. 3.

Lady cagers pursue elusive .500 mark

By Dave Kane
Sports Editor

The first of two crucial home games for the Saluki women's basketball team is scheduled for 5 p.m. Saturday at the Arena when SIU-C hosts Northern Illinois. The women's contest will precede the men's game against West Texas State.

The games Saturday night and Wednesday night against Illinois carry plenty of importance. For that matter, the team's four remaining regular-season games are equally important from the standpoint of the Salukis' hopes of reaching and surpassing the .500 mark.

SIU-C has a 12-15 record, but has won six of its last eight games. Saluki Coach Cindy Scott would like nothing better than to have a 16-15 record going into post-season play.

"These next few games are so crucial for us," Scott said. "If we beat Northern, it'll be the first time we've beaten an in-state team all year. We're also shooting for the .500 mark."

Saturday night will mark the first time a Huskie-Saluki dogfight has taken place in women's basketball, at least during Scott's four-year coaching career. The teams' records are similar, as NIU is 11-13, but Northern has dropped three of its last four games, including a recent 77-66 loss at home to Western Illinois. The Salukis also lost to WIU in mid-January, 82-77, but that was with six SIU-C players slapped with a one-game suspension.

"They've lost a lot of games by close scores," Scott said of the Huskies, "but I really think they're better than their record indicates. They're similar to us in that respect."

Scott noted that the two teams are about even in the height department, but NIU is ranked in the nation's top 10 in team rebounds.

"They aren't that big," Scott said. "They simply do a good job of boxing out and positioning under the boards."

SIU-C's fortunes against NIU and Illinois will have much influence on the team seedings for the IAAW State Tournament March 5-7 in Chicago. Scott expects Northwestern to draw the top spot since the Wildcats recently beat Illinois State at Evanston. The Salukis could have a lot to say about where teams will be ranked behind NIU.

"Wins over Northern and the U of I are a must if we're to gain any kind of decent seeding for the state tournament," Scott said. "If we beat Illinois, it'll definitely be interesting."
